Local Market Overview

BIST - TL based index returned to 4-digit levels. On the global side, the sideways trend continues with a wait-and-see strategy ahead of the Fed meeting on 18 December and the BoJ meeting on 19 December. In the local equity market, rising bond yields and corporate share transactions (DOAS, AKBNK, ISCTR) were responsible for the loss of momentum last week. The first trading day of the week saw the lowest trading volume (107.7 billion₺) since 7 December. On the other hand, the number of active accounts was back above the 7 million mark after a month of decline. We believe that the two IPOs last week contributed to the number of investors in the stock market in the short term. In the BIST-100 index, which has fallen back to its 200-day average of $285 (~TRY9,950) in USD terms, the recent moderate news flow related to Syria may support reaction buying in the short term. However, as we believe that the $295-300 (~TRY10,300-10,500) region is not likely to be breached, we attach importance to the $285-282 (~TRY9,950-9,850) range in the first phase of the short-term corrective trend. A breach of this area could lead to a continuation of the correction process towards the $280-277 (~TRY9,790-9680) area.

BİST-100 (Day, ABD$)

VIOP Index30 – The search for balance above 11,000 may continue despite volatility... In the December maturity Index30, while the intraday close was 11,094 at the opening of the week, the evening session closed at 11,108. Before the FOMC meeting to be held tomorrow, positive divergence in technology companies continued despite the decline in NVIDIA in US markets. On the domestic front, expectations for the MPC meeting on 26 December continue to diverge. BIST December futures faced the first sales at 11,570 after the rise that started on 29 November. The profit sales seem to have lost momentum above 11,000. However, volatility is also increasing between 11,000-11,300. If the weakening below this region continues, the previously mentioned 10.800 may emerge as an important support zone. While maintaining our positive expectations for buying opportunities in retracements, the reaction rise attempts that may start around 11.200 despite the volatility should be carefully monitored in the new week. In the main balance zone, the 11.570 zone will be maintained as resistance and another intermediate resistance is the 11.700 level in the 100g. average. The new day may start horizontally and limited positive above 11.000. Let us remind you that 11.000-10.910 levels are support and 11.120-11.200 levels are resistance zones to be used during the day.

Spot USDTRY.. The Turkish Lira has a real return relative to both actual and expected inflation. With the exclusion of the base effect in December and January CPI data, annual inflation may fall below 43% after January. Market participants' inflation expectations for the next 12 months are below 30%. Therefore, CBRT may start the easing process with a small step in December. Then, depending on the course of the data, we may see additional interest rate cuts in the following months. However, as the CBRT Governor clearly stated, tight monetary policy will be maintained even when the easing cycle starts. Because for the disinflation process to continue effectively, there must be a real return in TL. So even if the nominal interest rate level is lower next year, being in TL can still provide a real return.

Macroeconomic and Political News

Surplus in November in previous years, deficit in 2024

Central Budget Balance: In November, the central budget deficit was TRY17bn and the primary surplus TRY130bn. Even though expenditure yoy growth slowed down, the budget performance deteriorated compared to the previous year due to the more pronounced deceleration in revenue growth. Thus, the central budget balance, which had been in surplus in November in previous years, turned into a deficit in November 2024. On a 12-month basis, the budget deficit and primary deficit widened.
