Local Market Overview

BIST - Weekly losses are trying to be recovered. The lower-than-expected CPI data in the US contributed to the global risk appetite. US 10-year bond yield fell from 4.80% to 4.61%, while losses in equity markets were recovered. Dovish statements from Fed member Waller contributed to the decline in bond yields. Although the growth figures announced in China on the new day indicated that the year-end targets were achieved, they did not have a very strong impact on the regional markets. Having started the week with the decline in global risk appetite, the recovery in the Turkish equity market was not strong enough. On a weekly basis, BIST-100 index lost 0.4% of its value. Prior to the 23 January MPC meeting and Moody's credit rating review on 24 January, we had stated that we expected $273-270 (~TL9,690-9,550) to work as support in the BIST-100 index and that we expected reaction purchases ($280-286) above this region. At this stage, reaction purchases are not strong enough. We expect to start the new day with a flat trend. On a daily basis, we expect fluctuations between 9.770-9.750 and 9.950-9.970 in the first step. In the agenda of the day, CBRT President Karahan's speech in Eskişehir stands out. In addition, it should be noted that the CMB has approved the IPO with a total size of ~US$252 million.

BIST-100 (Day, ABD$)

VIOP Index30 – Although sales are losing volume with short bars around 11,170, stronger and widespread money inflows are needed for the uptrend to continue... In February maturity Index30, the intraday close was at 11,359, while it was realized at 11,345 in the evening session. The spring mood following the announcement of the ceasefire was dampened by disagreements over some of the previously agreed items. In the World Bank's forecast for global economic growth, it was announced that the Turkish economy is expected to grow by 2.6 percent this year and 3.8 percent next year. BIST30 February futures continue to stabilize around the 11,167 level. Despite the volatility created by the news flow during the day, it closed at 11,345, which is close to the intraday peak level of 11,388 after the intraday reaction rise that started at 11,175. Although sales are losing volume with short bars, stronger and widespread money inflows are needed for the uptrend to continue. The CBRT interest rate decision next week will also be on the agenda that will make an extra contribution to the direction of this movement. The last trading day of the week may start with a positive opening around 11.350 with the continuation of purchases, albeit limited. Let us remind you that 11.300-11.280 levels are the support and 11.410-11.450 levels are the resistance zone to be used during the day.

Spot USDTRY.. According to CBRT data, capital inflows to TL assets through the swap channel last week amounted to 5 billion USD. Thus, total capital inflows for carry trade since March 2024 reached around USD 30 billion. With the effect of tight monetary policy, there has been a reasonable real return potential in TRY for a long time. At the same time, we have been seeing a downward trend in inflation for some time with the help of factors such as stabilization in domestic demand and declining inflation expectations. The CBRT started to cut policy rates in line with the decline in inflation. In December, the weekly repo rate was cut by 250 bps. In December inflation data, CPI recorded a limited increase of 1% mom, well below market expectations. Due to wage hikes and administered price increases, higher inflation will be realized in January. However, due to the base effect, inflation is expected to decline on an annual basis in January and February. Therefore, we expect another 250 bps rate cut in January and March MPC meetings. Under these conditions, we expect the attractive real interest rate in TRY to be maintained and real appreciation to continue.
